

SEWING MACHINES.
$15 - SAVED - $15
THE NEW

WILSON
SEWING MACHINES
PRICE, FIFTY DOLLARS.

THE IMPROVEMENTS MADE ON THE "Wilson" during the year 1877 have placed it at the head of all competitors, and today it is without a rival. It is as durable as steel and iron can make. Every machine of the late CASE-HARDENED PLATE is warranted five years, and a warrant furnished with each machine.

The above cut represents the late Improved Machine, which rests flat with the table and runs light and rapidly, and makes the shuttle lock stitch, uses straight needle, and the celebrated WILSON-REMP improved in shape to cut a portion of the feed on both sides of the needle.

Remember the Fact, that high prices (on sewing machines) do not indicate superiority. The combination of the rig, and the mechanism, all serve to high prices, which they, sooner or later, will be forced to reduce on account of the unprecedented rapid and increasing sales of the

NEW WILSON SEWING MACHINE.
 Please call and examine even if you do not wish to purchase.

A full stock of Machine Twist Spool Cotton, Oil, Needles, etc., always on hand and for sale low.

BEACH & SUTHERLAND,
 323 Main Street, South of Union.
 61-62-219

THE OLD RELIABLE.
FRANKLIN
BOOK BINDERY.
Blank Book Manufactory

PRINTING HOUSE,
 15 West Court street, Memphis.
S. C. TOOF, Proprietor.

BOOKS BOUND AND MANUFACTURED.
 From a printer to the printer, books in the country, the Eastern market not excepted, at a fine price.

Quality Blank Books a Specialty.

PROPOSALS.
TO CONTRACTORS.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED at the office of the Secretary, for the Excavation of the lot (80 by 125 feet), and the basement brick work of the proposed Masonic Temple, Second street, between Second and Third streets. The contract will be let out to the lowest responsible bidder. The Director reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

By order of the Directors,
 C. B. CHURCH,
 J. M. POTTIER, Secy.
 Building Committee.

MEMPHIS PRESBYTERIAN!
 Rev. A. Shotwell, Editor.

HITE & SHOTWELL, Prop's
 PUBLISHED
EVERY SATURDAY.

Office: 385 Main Street.
 Terms: $1.50 per Annum.

INSURANCE.
MASONIC MUTUAL

Life Assurance Association,
 No. 334 Front Street,
 Magnolia Block, cor. Union street, up stairs

$12 CONSTITUTES YOU A MEMBER.
 $10 for policy, $1 examining fee, and $1 annually. No other expense except in case of the death of a member, when you will be assured $2.

REMOVAL.
REMOVAL.

THE OFFICE OF THE WESTERN METHODIST has been moved from 22 Jefferson street to 275 Main street, up stairs, in the rooms formerly occupied by G. W. L. Crook. Correspondents and others will take notice, and direct their letters accordingly. We issue now 6000 copies. The Methodist is a good medium for all.

R. W. BLEW & CO., Publishers.

WALL PAPER.
HOOK & LAGRILL,
 Dealers in

WALL PAPER
 And Window Shades,
 326 Second street, Memphis, Tenn.

STAMP GILTS, BRONZES, SATINS AND
 Blanks, Pressed Decorations, Center Pieces, Fire Screens, Stoves, etc.

FOR SALE.
MASONIC TEMPLE.
OLD BUILDING FOR SALE.

SEALED PROPOSALS WILL BE RECEIVED at the office of the Secretary, for the purchase of the two-story brick building on the northeast corner of Main and Second streets. The same must be removed within thirty days from date of purchase, or when ordered by the Directors. The Directors reserve the right to reject any and all bids.

By order of the Directors,
 H. H. HIGHER, President,
 A. J. WALKER, Secy.

CHICKERING PIANOS ARE THE BEST.—WERE AWARDED

PUBLIC LEDGER.
 By E. WHITMORE.
 VOL. XIV.
 LARGEST CITY CIRCULATION.

MEMPHIS, TENN.: SATURDAY EVENING, MARCH 9, 1872.
 NO. 8

PUBLIC LEDGER.
 THIS PUBLIC LEDGER IS PUBLISHED every afternoon (except Sunday) by E. WHITMORE, at No. 13 Madison street.

The Public Ledger is served to city subscribers by carrier at 10 cents per copy. By mail (in advance) One year, $4.50; six months, $2.50; three months, $1.50. Newsdealers supplied at 25 cents per copy.

Weekly Public Ledger.
 Published every Tuesday at $2 per annum (in advance); clubs of five or more, $1.50. Communications upon subjects of general interest to the public are at all times acceptable. Selected manuscripts will not be returned.

RATES OF ADVERTISING IN DAILY.
 First insertion, $1.00 per square. Subsequent insertions, 50 cents. For one week, $4.50. For two weeks, $8.00. For three weeks, $11.50. For one month, $18.00. For two months, $34.00. For three months, $50.00. For six months, $95.00. For one year, $175.00.

RATES OF ADVERTISING IN WEEKLY.
 First insertion, $1.00 per square. Subsequent insertions, 50 cents. For one week, $4.50. For two weeks, $8.00. For three weeks, $11.50. For one month, $18.00. For two months, $34.00. For three months, $50.00. For six months, $95.00. For one year, $175.00.

Displayed advertisements will be charged according to the space occupied, as above rates—there being twelve lines of solid type to the inch.

Notices in local columns inserted for twenty cents per line for each insertion.

To regular advertisers we offer superior inducements, such as to rate of charges and manner of displaying their favors.

Special notices inserted for ten cents per line for each insertion.

Notices of deaths and marriages, twenty cents per line.

All bills for advertising are due when contracted and payable on demand.

All letters, whether upon business or otherwise, must be addressed to E. WHITMORE, Publisher and Proprietor.

TENDER AND TRUE.
 He stole from his nest in his golden hair
 A knot of ribband blue;
 He placed on my head a jewel rare,
 And whispered soft as he held it there—
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

The almond was bending with blossoms white,
 The roses blushed through the dew;
 The violet smiled in the evening light,
 And life was happy and hope was bright.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

They brought my soldier home to me,
 And my knot of ribband blue;
 But the cruel wound on the brow was hid
 By the deep drops of the coffin-lid.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

The almond flower in the branches shone,
 The roses still blushed through the dew;
 But the springtime of hope will never come,
 And the lone, lone heart will wait till it break.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

BURNETT'S COCAINE is the best and cheapest hair-dressing in the world.

Society Fins.
 By Rev. Dr. Deems, pastor of the "Church of the Strangers," New York.

Truth is truth, and everything else is something else, no matter whether it is uttered by the lips of a diplomat or the budding mouth of a young beauty. You may call it a diamond, but that does not make it a diamond; you may call it a lie, but it is a lie all the same. You may whitewash a mud wall, but it does not change the mud into marble or granite. "White lies" are lies even if they be white as lilacs.

It is wrong to give intriguing names to bad things. It begets a colorblindness in morality. It breeds loose ideas of right. It is uncharitable to one's self. Why call a lie "a fib"? The words are of the same length. Each is as easy of utterance as the other. The former has an advantage over the latter, that it conveys to the hearer a distinct idea, the very idea which is in the mind of the speaker. "Fib" is the exact synonym of "lie," or it is not. If it is, then we have already assigned a reason for preference of the latter word. If it is not, what does it mean? It is supposed to signify a proposition which is neither a lie nor a truth. There is no such thing. The word lends to the supposition that there is, and therefore is bad.

What, then, are we to do in society? We must always be truthful. Can we be so, and not be rude? Most certainly. There comes that dreadful bore, whose company is so disagreeable. Just before he enters, two acquaintances have been discussing him, that is to say, not quite cursing him. Why should they "gush" at his entrance? Why should they take him in their arms in rapture? Will that cure him? Will it not confirm him in his bad habits? They suppose his intolerable behavior. They will thank themselves by malice on his behalf. "He shall have been departed, he," he better to sit still in silent misery, until his heart became martyred, with a sense of your sufferings. That might cure him. If it did not, it would save your conscience.

"Not at home," says the servant to the visitor. But the lady is at home. She is deep in a novel, which she must finish. How could she do in case if she should be called to depart this life, without knowing which of the characters married and which were killed? She certainly has the right to prefer her book to her visitor, but she has no right to put a lie in the mouth of her servants. It simply teaches the servant that the mistress regards a lie as no offense. When the maid practices up the mistress what the mistress has taught the maid to practice on visitors, what has the mistress to say? Will she turn off her servants and refuse to give her a "charge" because she was untruthful? Who taught that servant to be so?

If it be replied that no one is deceived by "society fins," then the answer is ready: Why use them? Why not tell the facts? The visitor can take no offense if the person shall return a word of fact or she is engaged may call.

It is a mistake to believe that no one is injured. No lie can be uttered with what ever concomitant of wit or gravity which does not hurt the utterer a character and reputation. Men come to learn that the "fibber" is not quite trustworthy, to say the least.

Five to children are outages on the fringes. When Dr. Chalmers was staying at a great house where there was much company, a lady was desirous of having his conversation through the evening, but her child was sleepy. The mother accompanied her little one to the chamber and soon returned to the drawing room where she boasted of her quick success by the stratagem of putting on her gown and night-cap and seeing to go to bed with the child, and the nurse had the desired effect. The good and great doctor had the moral courage to rebuke her for letting the last thing which the child heard from its mother be a lie.

A gentleman made it a rule to have his children hear nothing but the truth, if practicable. A visitor endeavored to tell to his children a story of a boy promising her a trinket which hung to his watch chain. The child yielded. When the visitor rose to go the father reminded him of his promise. O, he had no such intention! It was just a playful fib! The trinket was a costly piece of jewelry! "You should not have promised, but having promised you are bound to do as you said. I never permit lies to be told to my children. For the whole value of your piece of jewelry I would not have my child suppose that I could encourage the visit of a liar. He gave the trinket. It was a severe lesson. I say nothing as to the propriety of the father's course, but the visitor should not have "fibbed" to the child.

EXIT ROBERTS.
 The Tragical Consequences of Unappreciated Talent.

Death Preferable to Being Cast for Minor Parts.
 From the Nashville Banner, March 7.

W. R. Roberts, the actor who attempted to kill himself by thrusting the blade of a pocket knife into his breast and abdomen thirty-one times, at Bowling Green, Tuesday afternoon, lies in a critical condition, but little hope of his recovery is entertained.

Roberts was subject to fits of melancholy and frenzy—a state of mind which he believed to have been occasioned by the partial loss of his voice a year or so since, in consequence of which he had to be cast for minor parts. This depressed his spirit to such a degree that he came to the conclusion that he was unfitted for the world and the world for him, and that the sooner he was out of it the better. While suffering from the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, he would often remark that the burden of life was too heavy for him, and admitted that his thoughts ever tended toward "that mysterious bourne from which no traveler ever returns."

About four weeks ago he tried to kill himself at Winchester, Virginia, by cutting an ugly gash in his throat, but was saved by a skillful doctor and careful nursing.

Early Tuesday afternoon, Roberts went to bed in one of the hotels at Bowling Green. The opposite bed was occupied by Mr. S. W. Ashley, who had been suffering from a bilious attack. At half past three o'clock Mr. Ashley got up and dressed himself for the purpose of going after some medicine. Roberts asked him to close the door after him, as he wanted to take an uninterrupted nap. As Mr. Ashley went through the passage way, he heard Roberts get up and lock the door, but thought nothing of the circumstance. Mr. Ashley did not return to the room until he went with William Vestell, the latter having been requested to do so by Miss Kate Estelle, Roberts' sister, who said she believed her brother intended to kill himself. She had previously gone to his room and asked admittance. He opened the door for her and she thought she observed blood upon him, but the room was so dark that she was not able to take to this fact. He remarked to her, as she left the room, that she would be sorry if she didn't stop there and not go to the hall that night. As the hour at which she was to appear upon the stage had almost arrived, she hastened to the hall, hoping to find and send some one to prevent Roberts from doing any harm to himself.

When Vestell, Ashley and the landlady attempted to enter Roberts' room, they found the door locked and had to force it open, Roberts having become so weakened from the loss of blood that he was unable to rise from his bed. It was discovered that he had lost nearly a gallon and a half of blood, that his clothing, the sheets, quilts and the bed were completely saturated. The inside door knob which he had turned, upon the appearance of his sister, was covered with blood, and the door from his bed to the door, was red with the life-stream which he had so desperately poured out. His most serious wounds were below and above the heart and through the lungs, though none of the cuts were much wider than the knife-blade with which he had stabbed himself. The blade was as sharp as any razor, and if it had been pushed from side to side would doubtless have produced almost instant death.

The unhappy man insisted that his wounds would prove mortal, and shook his head despairingly when any chance for his recovery was suggested. On the last page of his diary the following entry had been made:

"Mr. Ashley has just left the room. I am going to take a good long sleep. Good-by, Life, forever."

Very little of Roberts' history is known here. W. R. Roberts is said to be his professional name. He was from New York, and had been connected with the Jenny Williams troupe only since she became the lessee of the Masonic Theatre. He will be cared for by the hospitable people of Bowling Green.

Public Ledger.
 This public ledger is published every afternoon (except Sunday) by E. Whitmore, at No. 13 Madison street.

The Public Ledger is served to city subscribers by carrier at 10 cents per copy. By mail (in advance) One year, $4.50; six months, $2.50; three months, $1.50. Newsdealers supplied at 25 cents per copy.

Weekly Public Ledger.
 Published every Tuesday at $2 per annum (in advance); clubs of five or more, $1.50. Communications upon subjects of general interest to the public are at all times acceptable. Selected manuscripts will not be returned.

RATES OF ADVERTISING IN DAILY.
 First insertion, $1.00 per square. Subsequent insertions, 50 cents. For one week, $4.50. For two weeks, $8.00. For three weeks, $11.50. For one month, $18.00. For two months, $34.00. For three months, $50.00. For six months, $95.00. For one year, $175.00.

RATES OF ADVERTISING IN WEEKLY.
 First insertion, $1.00 per square. Subsequent insertions, 50 cents. For one week, $4.50. For two weeks, $8.00. For three weeks, $11.50. For one month, $18.00. For two months, $34.00. For three months, $50.00. For six months, $95.00. For one year, $175.00.

Displayed advertisements will be charged according to the space occupied, as above rates—there being twelve lines of solid type to the inch.

Notices in local columns inserted for twenty cents per line for each insertion.

To regular advertisers we offer superior inducements, such as to rate of charges and manner of displaying their favors.

Special notices inserted for ten cents per line for each insertion.

Notices of deaths and marriages, twenty cents per line.

All bills for advertising are due when contracted and payable on demand.

All letters, whether upon business or otherwise, must be addressed to E. WHITMORE, Publisher and Proprietor.

TENDER AND TRUE.
 He stole from his nest in his golden hair
 A knot of ribband blue;
 He placed on my head a jewel rare,
 And whispered soft as he held it there—
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

The almond was bending with blossoms white,
 The roses blushed through the dew;
 The violet smiled in the evening light,
 And life was happy and hope was bright.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

They brought my soldier home to me,
 And my knot of ribband blue;
 But the cruel wound on the brow was hid
 By the deep drops of the coffin-lid.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

The almond flower in the branches shone,
 The roses still blushed through the dew;
 But the springtime of hope will never come,
 And the lone, lone heart will wait till it break.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

BURNETT'S COCAINE is the best and cheapest hair-dressing in the world.

Society Fins.
 By Rev. Dr. Deems, pastor of the "Church of the Strangers," New York.

Truth is truth, and everything else is something else, no matter whether it is uttered by the lips of a diplomat or the budding mouth of a young beauty. You may call it a diamond, but that does not make it a diamond; you may call it a lie, but it is a lie all the same. You may whitewash a mud wall, but it does not change the mud into marble or granite. "White lies" are lies even if they be white as lilacs.

It is wrong to give intriguing names to bad things. It begets a colorblindness in morality. It breeds loose ideas of right. It is uncharitable to one's self. Why call a lie "a fib"? The words are of the same length. Each is as easy of utterance as the other. The former has an advantage over the latter, that it conveys to the hearer a distinct idea, the very idea which is in the mind of the speaker. "Fib" is the exact synonym of "lie," or it is not. If it is, then we have already assigned a reason for preference of the latter word. If it is not, what does it mean? It is supposed to signify a proposition which is neither a lie nor a truth. There is no such thing. The word lends to the supposition that there is, and therefore is bad.

What, then, are we to do in society? We must always be truthful. Can we be so, and not be rude? Most certainly. There comes that dreadful bore, whose company is so disagreeable. Just before he enters, two acquaintances have been discussing him, that is to say, not quite cursing him. Why should they "gush" at his entrance? Why should they take him in their arms in rapture? Will that cure him? Will it not confirm him in his bad habits? They suppose his intolerable behavior. They will thank themselves by malice on his behalf. "He shall have been departed, he," he better to sit still in silent misery, until his heart became martyred, with a sense of your sufferings. That might cure him. If it did not, it would save your conscience.

"Not at home," says the servant to the visitor. But the lady is at home. She is deep in a novel, which she must finish. How could she do in case if she should be called to depart this life, without knowing which of the characters married and which were killed? She certainly has the right to prefer her book to her visitor, but she has no right to put a lie in the mouth of her servants. It simply teaches the servant that the mistress regards a lie as no offense. When the maid practices up the mistress what the mistress has taught the maid to practice on visitors, what has the mistress to say? Will she turn off her servants and refuse to give her a "charge" because she was untruthful? Who taught that servant to be so?

If it be replied that no one is deceived by "society fins," then the answer is ready: Why use them? Why not tell the facts? The visitor can take no offense if the person shall return a word of fact or she is engaged may call.

It is a mistake to believe that no one is injured. No lie can be uttered with what ever concomitant of wit or gravity which does not hurt the utterer a character and reputation. Men come to learn that the "fibber" is not quite trustworthy, to say the least.

Five to children are outages on the fringes. When Dr. Chalmers was staying at a great house where there was much company, a lady was desirous of having his conversation through the evening, but her child was sleepy. The mother accompanied her little one to the chamber and soon returned to the drawing room where she boasted of her quick success by the stratagem of putting on her gown and night-cap and seeing to go to bed with the child, and the nurse had the desired effect. The good and great doctor had the moral courage to rebuke her for letting the last thing which the child heard from its mother be a lie.

A gentleman made it a rule to have his children hear nothing but the truth, if practicable. A visitor endeavored to tell to his children a story of a boy promising her a trinket which hung to his watch chain. The child yielded. When the visitor rose to go the father reminded him of his promise. O, he had no such intention! It was just a playful fib! The trinket was a costly piece of jewelry! "You should not have promised, but having promised you are bound to do as you said. I never permit lies to be told to my children. For the whole value of your piece of jewelry I would not have my child suppose that I could encourage the visit of a liar. He gave the trinket. It was a severe lesson. I say nothing as to the propriety of the father's course, but the visitor should not have "fibbed" to the child.

EXIT ROBERTS.
 The Tragical Consequences of Unappreciated Talent.

Death Preferable to Being Cast for Minor Parts.
 From the Nashville Banner, March 7.

W. R. Roberts, the actor who attempted to kill himself by thrusting the blade of a pocket knife into his breast and abdomen thirty-one times, at Bowling Green, Tuesday afternoon, lies in a critical condition, but little hope of his recovery is entertained.

Roberts was subject to fits of melancholy and frenzy—a state of mind which he believed to have been occasioned by the partial loss of his voice a year or so since, in consequence of which he had to be cast for minor parts. This depressed his spirit to such a degree that he came to the conclusion that he was unfitted for the world and the world for him, and that the sooner he was out of it the better. While suffering from the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune, he would often remark that the burden of life was too heavy for him, and admitted that his thoughts ever tended toward "that mysterious bourne from which no traveler ever returns."

About four weeks ago he tried to kill himself at Winchester, Virginia, by cutting an ugly gash in his throat, but was saved by a skillful doctor and careful nursing.

Early Tuesday afternoon, Roberts went to bed in one of the hotels at Bowling Green. The opposite bed was occupied by Mr. S. W. Ashley, who had been suffering from a bilious attack. At half past three o'clock Mr. Ashley got up and dressed himself for the purpose of going after some medicine. Roberts asked him to close the door after him, as he wanted to take an uninterrupted nap. As Mr. Ashley went through the passage way, he heard Roberts get up and lock the door, but thought nothing of the circumstance. Mr. Ashley did not return to the room until he went with William Vestell, the latter having been requested to do so by Miss Kate Estelle, Roberts' sister, who said she believed her brother intended to kill himself. She had previously gone to his room and asked admittance. He opened the door for her and she thought she observed blood upon him, but the room was so dark that she was not able to take to this fact. He remarked to her, as she left the room, that she would be sorry if she didn't stop there and not go to the hall that night. As the hour at which she was to appear upon the stage had almost arrived, she hastened to the hall, hoping to find and send some one to prevent Roberts from doing any harm to himself.

Public Ledger.
 This public ledger is published every afternoon (except Sunday) by E. Whitmore, at No. 13 Madison street.

The Public Ledger is served to city subscribers by carrier at 10 cents per copy. By mail (in advance) One year, $4.50; six months, $2.50; three months, $1.50. Newsdealers supplied at 25 cents per copy.

Weekly Public Ledger.
 Published every Tuesday at $2 per annum (in advance); clubs of five or more, $1.50. Communications upon subjects of general interest to the public are at all times acceptable. Selected manuscripts will not be returned.

RATES OF ADVERTISING IN DAILY.
 First insertion, $1.00 per square. Subsequent insertions, 50 cents. For one week, $4.50. For two weeks, $8.00. For three weeks, $11.50. For one month, $18.00. For two months, $34.00. For three months, $50.00. For six months, $95.00. For one year, $175.00.

RATES OF ADVERTISING IN WEEKLY.
 First insertion, $1.00 per square. Subsequent insertions, 50 cents. For one week, $4.50. For two weeks, $8.00. For three weeks, $11.50. For one month, $18.00. For two months, $34.00. For three months, $50.00. For six months, $95.00. For one year, $175.00.

Displayed advertisements will be charged according to the space occupied, as above rates—there being twelve lines of solid type to the inch.

Notices in local columns inserted for twenty cents per line for each insertion.

To regular advertisers we offer superior inducements, such as to rate of charges and manner of displaying their favors.

Special notices inserted for ten cents per line for each insertion.

Notices of deaths and marriages, twenty cents per line.

All bills for advertising are due when contracted and payable on demand.

All letters, whether upon business or otherwise, must be addressed to E. WHITMORE, Publisher and Proprietor.

TENDER AND TRUE.
 He stole from his nest in his golden hair
 A knot of ribband blue;
 He placed on my head a jewel rare,
 And whispered soft as he held it there—
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

The almond was bending with blossoms white,
 The roses blushed through the dew;
 The violet smiled in the evening light,
 And life was happy and hope was bright.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

They brought my soldier home to me,
 And my knot of ribband blue;
 But the cruel wound on the brow was hid
 By the deep drops of the coffin-lid.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

The almond flower in the branches shone,
 The roses still blushed through the dew;
 But the springtime of hope will never come,
 And the lone, lone heart will wait till it break.
 Tender and true—adieu, adieu!

BURNETT'S COCAINE is the best and cheapest hair-dressing in the world.

Society Fins.
 By Rev. Dr. Deems, pastor of the "Church of the Strangers," New York.

Truth is truth, and everything else is something else, no matter whether it is uttered by the lips of a diplomat or the budding mouth of a young beauty. You may call it a diamond, but that does not make it a diamond; you may call it a lie, but it is a lie all the same. You may whitewash a mud wall, but it does not change the mud into marble or granite. "White lies" are lies even if they be white as lilacs.

It is wrong to give intriguing names to bad things. It begets a colorblindness in morality. It breeds loose ideas of right. It is uncharitable to one's self. Why call a lie "a fib"? The words are of the same length. Each is as easy of utterance as the other. The former has an advantage over the latter, that it conveys to the hearer a distinct idea, the very idea which is in the mind of the speaker. "Fib" is the exact synonym of "lie," or it is not. If it is, then we have already assigned a reason for preference of the latter word. If it is not, what does it mean? It is supposed to signify a proposition which is neither a lie nor a truth. There is no such thing. The word lends to the supposition that there is, and therefore is bad.

What, then, are we to do in society? We must always be truthful. Can we be so, and not be rude? Most certainly. There comes that dreadful bore, whose company is so disagreeable. Just before he enters, two acquaintances have been discussing him, that is to say, not quite cursing him. Why should they "gush" at his entrance? Why should they take him in their arms in rapture? Will that cure him? Will it not confirm him in his bad habits? They suppose his intolerable behavior. They will thank themselves by malice on his behalf. "He shall have been departed, he," he better to sit still in silent misery, until his heart became martyred, with a sense of your sufferings. That might cure him. If it did not, it would save your conscience.

"Not at home," says the servant to the visitor. But the lady is at home. She is deep in a novel, which she must finish. How could she do in case if she should be called to depart this life, without knowing which of the characters married and which were killed? She certainly has the right to prefer her book to her visitor, but she has no right to put a lie in the mouth of her servants. It simply teaches the servant that the mistress regards a lie as no offense. When the maid practices up the mistress what the mistress has taught the maid to practice on visitors, what has the mistress to say? Will she turn off her servants and refuse to give her a "charge" because she was untruthful? Who taught that servant to be so?

If it be replied that no one is deceived by "society fins," then the answer is ready: Why use them? Why not tell the facts? The visitor can take no offense if the person shall return a word of fact or she is engaged may call.

It is a mistake to believe that no one is injured. No lie can be uttered with what ever concomitant of wit or gravity which does not hurt the utterer a character and reputation. Men come to learn that the "fibber" is not quite trustworthy, to say the least.

Five to children are outages on the fringes. When Dr. Chalmers was staying at a great house where there was much company, a lady was desirous of having his conversation through the evening, but her child was sleepy. The mother accompanied her little one to the chamber and soon returned to the drawing room where she boasted of her quick success by the stratagem of putting on her gown and night-cap and seeing to go to bed with the child, and the nurse had the desired effect. The good and great doctor had the moral courage to rebuke her for letting the last thing which the child heard from its mother be a lie.

A gentleman made it a rule to have his children hear nothing but the truth, if practicable. A visitor endeavored to tell to his children a story of a boy promising her a trinket which hung to his watch chain. The child yielded. When the visitor rose to go the father reminded him of his promise. O, he had no such intention! It was just a playful fib! The trinket was a costly piece of jewelry! "You should not have promised, but having promised you are bound to do as you said. I never permit lies to be told to my children. For the whole value of your piece of jewelry I would not have my child suppose that I could encourage the visit of a liar. He gave the trinket. It was a severe lesson. I say nothing as to the propriety of the